Kunigami Village

Kunigami Village is the northernmost village on Okinawa's main island. It is home to one of Japan's most extensive subtropical evergreen forests and a rich natural environment home to endemic and rare plant and animal species such as the Okinawa rail (Yanbaru kuina) and the Okinawa woodpecker. The proximity of sports facilities and accommodations makes it an ideal environment for sports camps. Various training camps have been held for professional baseball, track and field, and the Japanese national weightlifting team.

Ginoza Village

Surrounded by abundant water resources and deep greenery that provides moisture and tranquility, Ginoza Village has the catchphrase "the village of water, greenery, and the sun." The Hanshin Tigers professional baseball team's spring training camp began in 2003. Grown-ups, universities, and high school teams actively hold baseball training camps here. In 2010, the National High School Canoe Competition was held at the Kanna Dam Lake, which led to the hosting of the Japan Canoe Federation and other overseas team training camps.

Kin Town

Kin town faces the Pacific Ocean, roughly in the center of the main island of Okinawa, and is the birthplace of "Taco Rice." The town has a history of prosperity as the gate town of a military base, and the streets are full of an exotic atmosphere. The town has various physical education facilities, including a baseball stadium, tennis courts, swimming pool, gymnasium, and track and field, which are well maintained and are among the best in the prefecture. Among them, Kin Town Football Center is a dedicated soccer facility. J-League teams use it for their spring training camps.

Itoman City

Itoman City, known as the city of "Uminchu" (fisherman), has a thriving fishing industry. Many people from inside and outside the prefecture visit the festival every year, where traditional events such as "Haree," a prayer for a big catch and safe voyage, and Eisa, a memorial service for ancestors, are held on a grand scale, J-League camps and Japan's national para-athletic team training camps are held at the Nishizaki Athletic Field.
